Considering himself both an artist and photographer, Finn Goldstraw lives and works in Naarm/Melbourne. Focusing primarily on conceptual and documentary photography, his practice currently focuses on the expression and exploration of psychological themes through a photographic lens. He also creates works that explore the three-dimensionality and technical aspects of photography using collaging techniques and found objects. Finn studied at Monash University and graduated in 2023 with a Double Bachelor of Visual Arts and Arts (extended Major in Psychology). This year he completed a Creative Residency at the Centre for Contemporary Photography and is working on completing his first photobook.

Test Pattern is named after the television visual calibration pattern used frequently between broadcasting times. Featured within the exhibit are works that were created at different times, with different mediums, and with different intentions, all presented through instinctive and playful curation. This exhibit takes images from amongst multiple unfinished and finished projects from the last three years and asks the viewer to identify their own themes and narratives that present themselves within this exhibit. Akin to a mixtape, this exhibit is about fun, exploration, and a building of cohesion from different sources. For the artist, this exhibit is a chance to rest and recalibrate, identifying patterns from the past in order to test for the future.
